

Our offer, your future.

Delta Application Technics offers customers solutions for the application and dosing of single and multi-component products. This goes from polyurethane spraying on tanks to mixing silicones for the medical sector. The roots of the company date back to 1988, when working under the name Corex as a two-man business. As a result, extensive experience in the sector can be reversed. By taking care of both the engineering, the manufacture and the production of the desired solution, we can guide the customers in the total process to a well-functioning end product. To guarantee our further growth we are currently looking for a (m / f):
